Mephedrone: Legalisation? Mephedrone is probably the most popular and most easily accessible stimulant that has become popular in recent years. It is a substance that is now legal for recreational use in the UK. It is referred to as being 'legal highs', due to the fact that it is listed as a controlled substance, despite still being illegal. Often, mephedrone users tend to use it in combination with other substances, to enhance or create a better high. Mephedrone is said to speed up the user's heart rate, and enable a person to stay awake and active for longer periods of time. Legal or Illegal Mephedrone is banned as a result of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971, which states that "Schedule 2" substances must be considered illegal for adults to consume. "Schedule 2" drugs can only be supplied by the pharmaceutical industry under the control of the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency. There has also been uncertainty over whether mephedrone should be classed as an 'asthma drug', under the Misuse of Drugs Act, the Misuse of Drugs Regulations, the Medicines Act and the Clinical Trials Regulations. The law states that a company cannot produce a drug if it makes the drug available to under 18s. However, this could mean that the substance is unable to be provided to those who require it. Despite being legal for use in the UK, Mephedrone can be extremely dangerous to use as it can have harmful side effects, some of which are known. Legal systems are complicated, and this drug has not been studied extensively. Some effects include feeling like you are high, and you can experience hallucinations. The use of Mephedrone has been linked to paranoia, violence, increasing heart rate and breathing, so as well as brain damage. Many people who take Mephedrone suffer from depression, anxiety and suicidal ideation. Mephedrone has also been linked to sudden cardiac arrest in animal testing. Withdrawal Whilst Mephedrone is legal to use, the ill effects of the drug can be extremely dangerous. Many different scenarios and effects are possible when taking Mephedrone. Withdrawal
