The five-step process that I describe in Chapter 10 lets you produce a very professional-looking image. But it's simple enough that anyone can master the technique! The photographic process doesn't have to be intimidating, and you can really take your skills to the next level with these five steps: 1. Understand the fundamentals of a good image. 2. Create a basic composition — what you want your viewer to see. 3. Find the subject of your image. 4. Pose the subject and then shoot the image. 5. Edit the image so it's ready to show the world. If you start with a clean slate, you will be in a much better position for all the advanced techniques that follow. Understanding the Fundamentals of Good Photos A good photograph is a simple concept and it takes a few steps to make. Start with a lens that records light coming into the camera properly, with good resolution, and then correctly expose for the image. (I talk more about shutter speed and aperture in Chapter 2.) "You are what you shoot" is a rule of photography, and you don't need to be a professional photographer to get good photos — all you need is a camera and lens with decent resolution and optics. This is still a part of the process, but as you work through this chapter, you'll be taking a different tack, tackling the subject of composition. You don't need a pro photographer's eye to capture the scene, especially if you're not very experienced. For example, you might be visiting a place like Iceland, where the light is unique, and you want to capture it. So just make sure that you focus and shoot from an interesting angle. If you're just too nervous, the picture will capture your nervousness. Using Composition to Capture an Image Composition is one of the most important parts of capturing a great image. Your subject should be the most prominent element in the image, and the background should be a part of the image and should complement it, not distract from it. Your subject can be a person, a landscape or building, an event, a mood, or a feeling. Some photographers have a favorite subject — some have an artistic impulse that leads them to certain themes. One of the biggest mistakes you can make is to put your subject smack in the middle of the frame and completely obscure the background. Figure 8-1 shows an

What's New In?

Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., said Tuesday that Congress needs to overhaul the Affordable Care Act, but as a senator, he's not going to repeal it or vote to take it away from people. Instead, Sanders said, the ACA "should be completely overhauled." He went on to say that he has never voted to repeal a law, and "I intend to make certain that we do not take away affordable health insurance from millions of Americans." Sanders and a bipartisan group of 17 senators sent a letter to President Barack Obama on Tuesday urging him to consider a one-year delay to the individual mandate, which requires that people purchase health insurance. The senators also said they want the IRS to come up with a plan to help people who chose not to purchase health insurance. The IRS already has a mechanism to grant extensions for people who can't afford insurance, but many people don't apply. Sanders said the mandate was designed to force younger people to get insurance. "They were told that it was mandatory," Sanders said. "It wasn't mandatory, they found that out only when they had to get health insurance in order to stay on the job." Sanders said the IRS should offer some relief to those people who can't afford insurance. In a statement, Ryan Rudominer, a spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said Sanders is putting his Senate constituents and his campaign donors before the people of Vermont. "Senator Sanders supports President Obama's radical health care plan, and has voted to raise taxes and destroy jobs," Rudominer said in the statement. "He has a record that puts him more in line with the big government socialist agenda that caused the economic downfall of so many Vermonters." Sanders also faces criticism from the Rev. Al Sharpton. "Sen. Sanders is just another candidate who uses the race card and is very familiar with playing class warfare," Sharpton said in a statement. "We must be careful not to divide against each other as this country is going through difficult times. "Sen. Sanders is all about going down the same road President Obama took," Sharpton said. "He wants to remain within the confines of the same failed policies that have failed the black community. Sen. Sanders and President Obama both need to take a national journey to bring back a sense of community." Sharpton spokesman Charles K. Haywood says there is no difference between the two candidates.
