HDQ: Get number of open records in a SQL Server Agent Job I have a SQL Server Job which runs on a scheduled basis. When the job runs, it gets the next available id from a table and increments it. One of the steps which it runs is to select some data from another table, then create a new record in a third table using that data, then use the new record id to update the third table. How can I get the job to know how many open records there are currently in the second table? I want to get this value so that I can run a validation step on the first table. If there are more than x open records, I need to first lock that table before I insert into it (then check if the value in the table changed between the start of the job and the end). Can anyone suggest a way of doing this? Thanks A: The following article solves this problem nicely:
