It is built to be able to combine, move, transform, paint, and edit layers. As a result, it is both an image-editing program and a digital photo editor. There is a learning curve and lots of features to figure out, but using Photoshop gives users the ability to create and manipulate images like very few other programs can. There are different types of layers, and each tool has a toolbox which allows users to perform multiple operations by selecting multiple tools and clicking on a single tool to perform them. The order in which you use the tools is dependent on the nature of the operation. Weitzel*, 69 F.2d 826, 829 (8th Cir.1934). "[T]he word 'settlement' is uniformly understood in its ordinary legal meaning to denote a compromise in a dispute rather than the act of a mere indemnifier or other intermediate party. It usually means the substitution of a smaller for a larger sum of money, or of that portion of such a sum which is agreed to be substituted, in complete satisfaction of the demand in dispute between the parties, or of those entitled thereto." ... Where a liability insurer has undertaken the defense of the original tort-feasor, the initial settlement by the latter of the claim of the injured person against him is an important factor in determining whether or not the insurer may thereafter question his own insured as to the manner in which his own conduct contributed to the settlement;... the insurer must be held to have impliedly insured the liability of its insured who, in the exercise of his exclusive option, settled the claim as he saw fit by rejecting the liability of his principal. Davenport, supra, at 1177-1178 (emphasis added). See also, e.g., National Casualty Co. v. Henderson, 173 F.2d 545, 547 (5th Cir.1949), where the court declared: The language of the policy refers to "settlements" made by the assured. "Settlement" means a compromise *1131 between the parties thereto and does not require the knowledge or consent of any third person, [and] [a]lthough the policy in terms waives notice of claims and actions, such waiver does not affect the right to insure against judgments resulting from settlements. See also, e.g., Country Mut. Ins. Co. v. Employers Ins. of Wausau, 626 F.2d 647, 648 (9th Cir.1980), where the court similarly held that the insurer had no defense to its duty to defend its insured where the defense was based on a settlement entered into by the plaintiff without the insurer's knowledge: [T]he policy insured only against tort liability of the assured for injuries which occurred during the policy period. It did not encompass possible liability for the assured's alleged negligence in failing to discover the possible claim

We report here that an ANP gene promoter-luciferase construct was expressed in murine astrocyte cells and that c-Jun and CREB were both necessary for its activity.
