A pilot study. Patients with fatigue often report a sense of being exposed to hypoxia. The aim of this study was to investigate whether there is a connection between hypoxia and fatigue. In a prospective cohort study, patients with fatigue who reported having been exposed to hypoxia filled out a new, short-form questionnaire on psychological problems, which was based on the Maudsley Obsessive-Compulsive Inventory (MOCI). Fatigability was assessed with the Visual Analogue

Scale and the hematological studies underwent reanalysis from samples taken at baseline. There was a significant correlation between hypoxia and fatigue at one month (P=0.001) and two months (P=0.02) follow-up. No significant difference was found between baseline and follow-up for a hematological parameter. The study demonstrates a probable connection between hypox
