I think I'm close but I'm getting this error I don't understand: Not Found: /myapp/_static/js/main.3399985b.js In my app's static folder I have both my Javascript libraries and my css files. I'm guessing I need to change the order of the hangups. Here are my settings in wagtail: STATIC_URL = '/static/' STATIC_ROOT = os.path.join(BASE_DIR,'static') STATICFILES_DIRS = (os.path.join(BASE_DIR, "static"), os.path.join(BASE_DIR, "static/js"), os.path.join(BASE_DIR, "static/css"),) I've attached the source of wagtail's source here: A: The problem here is that STATICFILES_DIRS expects a comma-delimited list of directories. Not a full path, which is what os.path.join produces. The solution is to change your current STATICFILES_DIRS setting to: STATICFILES_DIRS = (os.path.join(BASE_DIR, "static"), os.path.join(BASE_DIR, "static/js"), os.path.join(BASE_DIR, "static/css"),) Or if you want to stick with wagtail's handling

Hello there I'm interested in the game It should be fun to play, interesting characters to work togetherQ: Is there more to a camera trap than having an image? What makes a camera trap different from a regular camera? Is this only a matter of having a digital image when your doing a manual recording of noise and shooting to a computer? A: A normal camera is not the same as a digital camera. When we shoot a picture using a normal film camera, what it means is that we have to pull the film out of the camera, put it in a developing lab and wait for the picture to be taken. Any error in placement or roll will leave the picture undeveloped. An analogous example is carrying a cellphone with a camera app. The camera is always there, but you can't activate it until you push the button. This means the person must leave the place where they are and go somewhere else in order to activate their phone to have it take a picture. In the case of a digital camera, we don't have to do anything. The images are already in our computer after they are taken. Today, the International Air Transport Association (IATA) forecasted a

Last Sena review Mon, 16 Mar 2009 22:17:22 +0000reviews2420105

"The Last Sena" (formerly known as "Lazaare") is a turn-based war game that was developed by Japanese developer M2 in collaboration with the game theme's 20th anniversary. This would be their second game and their first original title since "T_tappu".

For a turn-based game, it tries to do way more than other turn-based games such as the "Kamen no Fuda: Maiden of the Mist" (remake). Instead of simply having one round, they put the campaign scenario into a "single" scenario. They also have not one party of ten characters, but a party of several, ranging from 15 to 27. The screen resolution is 1024x864, and the number of rounds are estimated to be around 300. This game feels more like the "Final Fantasy Tactics" compared to the "T_tappu", but still it's not a "Strategy RPG".

Gameplay and Controls

To complete the daily mission, you must make at least two turns, such as purchasing one of the eight kinds of area and moving a unit to that area. There are ten types of characters, of which you should keep five.

In the "Game Room", the times of the day were adjusted such that the characters never attack a rival until around ten after ten. When a battle in the "Game Room" becomes critical, you will be transported to the battle field, where the game screen becomes completely black.

In the course of the single scenario, you can enter "Suspension," of which the screen will start moving up and down, and you will be able to travel to the mid or lower part of the play field.

Equipment and Stats are given only to the action units. For magic users, the effect turns hostile only if the "Attr" and "Def" types are both plus, and the enemy also has a minus type. If the effect becomes hostile before you recover the counter, the battle will go into "suspension".

When you attack, the "
