The ward 1 seat is currently held by Councilman Zack Popolizio, the ward 3 seat is currently held by Councilman Michael Stinziano, and the ward 4 seat is currently held by Councilman Zack Reed. He submitted his name to the city on Jan. 1. This is the first time Carroll is running for a council seat and the first time since 1986 that no Republicans have been elected to Columbus' council. Redfern has held the vice president position since 2018. She's faced no opponent in the primary. Carroll was sworn in as a council member for Ward 1 on May 14, according to her campaign's website. Carroll is seeking a second term on the council, according to her website. She is unopposed. In a May 14 Facebook post, Carroll said she wasn't going to re-nominate then-City Manager Scott Stiles in the August primary because "We need a true leader at the helm, with fresh ideas, not a City Manager with the same ideas he's been delivering for 17 years."
