-Sketches and large pictures of historic aircraft, including British Sopwith Pups, French Nieuport 28s, Russian Rebs, German Albatros, and more. -An operational diagram showing a split screen map and aerial action. -As the Germans move into Western Europe in April 1916, victory in the air can still be won by strategic positioning. Infantry, artillery, and air units can be positioned on the map. As each unit is assigned a unique symbol, you will need to carefully position them in order to gain the upper hand in combat. -All the missions and campaigns are fact-based. A historical campaign features the Royal Flying Corps taking on the German Luftstreitkräfte in the skies over the Verdun front. -You can control a British or German squadron in both fact-based and fictional missions. -The RAF (R.F.C.) campaign features 15 campaigns, one for each month of the year. The campaigns are based on historical engagements, and chronicle the progress of the Royal Flying Corps into France and Belgium. -Battle against historical characters, including Lord Kitchener,

What is DDD? It's a pet behavior-based escape game without the puzzles. It's rather strategic in nature. The Cops are going to follow you as you try to make your way to freedom. But they may not know where you are hiding. It's a matter of following your friends' footprints, and staying out of sight. Find friends on the server, navigate through the city, and watch your friends whisper in the bushes. You don't have to be the fastest, just stealthy. You may have to help your friends out, or at least decide if they deserve a better fate. A state board in North Carolina voted unanimously on Tuesday to approve a new transgender bathroom policy that states public school children can use the bathroom that corresponds to their gender identity, and all the other ones be left the hell alone. From The Washington Post: The new policy adopted Tuesday by the State Board of Education goes beyond the federal guidelines that require public schools to let students use the bathroom that corresponds to their gender identity, but do not explicitly spell out their civil rights. The state says the new policy covers physical facilities. Overall, the board voted 5-0 to adopt the new policy, which also covers transgender students who participate in extracurricular activities. From the board's summary of the policy: "It is the intent of this policy to provide students and their parents with a safe environment that supports and respects their gender identity, and to help ensure that they are free to attend school and participate in school activities without fear of discrimination or harassment." The school board will be placing the policy in effect in 2017, but requires schools to implement it by the fall of 2019. Advocates for transgender students applauded the new policy, but warned that some uncertainty will remain for transgender students until it is implemented. "We are particularly concerned that as the school year gets underway, transgender students will face confusion and distraction if their schools fail to provide them with the protections that this policy provides," said Imani Perry, a spokeswoman for the Human Rights Campaign, a national LGBT rights advocacy group. The state board has until Feb. 5, 2017 to implement the policy. The Associated Press reported that opponents of the new policy were left fuming. “I’ve never been in a room that was so divided,” said Terri Latham of Durham, who has two children at Triangle Tech High School, a magnet school. c9d1549cdd

Japanese: You will start this game with a girl named Kaori from Fukushima Prefecture who just finished elementary school. You will start this game when she is walking in the countryside area. The game contains some kind of an RPG gameplay, you will have dialogue with other characters and you will also experience fight scene in your game. This game is interactive! The following characters will also talk with you in the game. There is a big spoiler in the game if you do not read this. The following characters also talk with you. The following characters are not playable but you can still talk to them. It is an interactive visual novel. As you can guess, she is in a countryside area and she is in a bad situation where there is a great amount of snow on the ground. She has lost her cellphone so she will not be able to find out where she is and she will need to find a cellphone in order to communicate with people. There are two options to play the game. The first one is to play as a main character and there will be a lot of different characters to interact with. The second one is to play as Kaori as the main character. You will play with the same amount of characters and after the main story is finished, you will also get to a special bonus scenario. The game will be enjoyable if you are not sensitive to some of the stories that will be told in the game. It contains some more than some characters in the game have their own love interests. But remember, there will be spoilers. This game contains: © "You don't know me?" "People call me Akiyuki-chan." © "Your love is in the way... I can't turn my back on it." "... you have become like a Demon-chan." "I'm like a Demon-chan!"

- 26-27 It was Star Wars day again. Such a fun day it is. It was time for a new Rebel vs. Imperial game. So what happened? As always, by way of intro, let's start with the player-side summary. 2.1 (Jordan) Okay, so we decided to preview the game. Our group was split so we had Victor and I decide we'd go first. So I took the lead - peeling a shuttle from a cargo hold. Our cards in hand were: Sandtrooper Impetuous Crew SPD Troopers Now, the moment I had been craving for our whole campaign, was right on the horizon. Here we go! 2.2 (Victor) I set up with a central base, which gives access to the weapons hardpoint. It's a central position for sure. My first order of business was to boost a craft to a shuttle (late). The objective here was to get the jump on Corran and lock down that Astromech, Avenger, SD, or whatever from Corran. I drop a probe. On the right side I have a running droid over an Imperial, and they're going to get in each other's face in 1. - Which doesn't mean much, because apparently the Yavin cartel - which is going to be an important part of this game - have some strange way of negotiating deals in the universe. Victor dropped a droid bomb on me, killing my probe. But thankfully, I watched both ranks for an entire turn, so I didn't lose any production. 2.3 (Jordan) Victor named off a couple of other things he was going to do, but I didn't really expect him to do any of them. I used my last turn to put in another probe, and that takes some of the pressure off of landing a munitions shuttle. On three, I drop a shuttle and run it into a repair bay. At the start of turn two I still only have one munitions shuttle. 2.4 (Victor) I knew there was no reason to wait a turn, so I fly down to build up a munitions shuttle with the shuttle bomber and an assault shuttle.

Unfortunately, for the first
