We are two huge gamers from the Central Europe and since we got acquainted, we realised, that we have the same passion for gaming. We created our own steam community, where we can share our opinions and thoughts of our gaming experience. Our portfolio consists of original works that we produce for ourselves, which we want to share with you and the rest of the community. We hope that together we will be able to create a nice atmosphere on the site. — Trapped is a first-person horror game with puzzle elements. In the game you have to get out of this strange place, but for this you will have to examine it, and try not to get caught by its inmates. The walkthrough of the game will take ~50 minutes About The Game Cooking Companions: We are two huge gamers from the Central Europe and since we got acquainted, we realised, that we have the same passion for gaming. It is the sequel to Garriot's 1984 Dungeon Master. New features include battles against enemies with unique AI routines, multi-player play against customized dial-a-computer opponents and the ability to import character files from the original Dungeon Master. It was the first game to feature the Tycoons' guilds, the first 3D game to have multi-player tournaments (the first being M.U.L.E.), and had one of the first full-screen 3D menus in video games; It was also the first game that would include voice synthesis. Gameplay Up to 16 players go at it on the same screen, competing for dominance as tycoon over a world that is divided up into regions containing many cities and villages: large players have more cities than others. The goal is to earn the most money by conquering all of the region's towns. Controls are given for defense, diplomacy, production, research, and trade, the last two involving the Cities tab for multitasking. Unlike Dungeon Master, Tycoon is a purely turn-based game, in which each player takes a turn in a region. Within a turn, a player may do one of several tasks: gather money in a town, sell a batch of goods at their store for specific amounts of money, hire workers to build houses/units or mines/oil wells/quarries/etc. In other words, the actions can be thought of as an event list. Each of the player's tycoons has a set of routines built in, called events, that are performed when they are activated. Some routines are specific to the tycoon: for example, 'build-house(event_name)' sets up a builder to build ten single-story townhouses as soon as a buy wallhouse event occurs, while 'hire-worker(manager,
