Are you a video game fan? You might be interested to know that a new game on the PlayStation Network in the past few days has the largest soundtrack collection of any game currently available on the system. I'm talking about Kid Koala's Floor Kids: Original Soundtrack, which features exclusive songs from the talented hip-hop beatmaster. Tune in to PlayStation Universe this week for the first, full-length interview with Kid Koala. Rebel Pop: Can you tell me a little bit about yourself? Kid Koala: I'm a writer, producer, beatmaster, rapper and notary public. I'm almost too much a product of my environment. My mom was a home health aide and my dad was a maintenance man and they both basically told me that a free education and the ability to create something was the best way to improve my station in life. When I was growing up we moved a lot so I always felt like I was on the move. I had this concept for a video game I worked on a while back that I called "Circuit Riders" (it's actually a PlayStation 2 game in development now) so I started a thing called The Circuit Rider Jazz Alliance and put out a mixtape called Circuit Rider Jazz for free on the site, and started touring across the country and putting on CD releases. And my rap career started from there. I started with a group called Vic & Sly as a DJ. The group is a little embarrassing to discuss because we were far too quiet, but we had a lot of good tunes, a few of which I did beats for. Afterward I went into the studio and formed a band called Masters in Deception and I was actually offered a record contract for my first record but I wasn't really a rapper. I really started as a hip-hop beatmaster and started combining that with rap in the late 90s. Then the early 2000s came and I was doing work with a lot of renowned hip-hop artists and bands and I was just like, "I'm going to figure out a way to get this music out to a broader audience." So I started to create albums under the name Kid Koala and they were all hip-hop albums so I just decided to create a DVD of the whole thing and that's how it started. The first was "The Albino Switch" in 2002. RP: I hear you've been prolific as far as album production goes. Can you tell me a little bit
