Q: Generic Interfaces in Monodroid I'm trying to make an Android application that creates objects through Generics. However the problem is, Generics are not supported in Android. I found some things related to Generics. Generics in C# Lambda Expression : Java 8 Learn in One Day with Codamore Generics from Google Generics I can't understand them well. Just for example, I don't know when you use them or when you don't. Please show me a good example for Generics and generics in Android. I'm sorry for my lack of knowledge. A: AFAIK, with the exception of Java, C# and the .Net API is the only ones allowing Generics. For implementing Generics, I'm not sure if Android is the best option (a native code implementation is probably better). If it's acceptable to use MonoDroid, then I would use the NDK and use a .Net based implementation (i.e. similar to C#, but compiling down to mono-JNI and communicating with the JVM via JNI). I'm a bit surprised that you say that Generics are not supported in Android. I'm also surprised that you haven't found any resources on the topic. Most of the links I found on Generics relate to implementing interfaces, but you seem to want to generate generic classes. I wrote a small tutorial a while ago: Generics Tutorial: Java, Android, NDK: There is also a class implementing Generics in the android source: Generics-based-android-app. A: I found this blog where the author explains very well how generics works in java, and about generics in android. Why not use Generics Generics are supported in Java, but not in Android. The reason is that the Android API was designed to be mostly-compatible with the Java API. So, Java programmers look at some of the Java features from Android and assume they are just like the Java features. That is a mistake: With the Java Language Specification, java.lang is a good example. People create classes for java.lang, and assume that the java.

Sesquipedalian Loquaciousness Menu Mini-Mingle at TCAT For the last two years I have been toiling away, getting ready for my plans to participate in the "Hall of Fame Induction" in San Antonio, Texas next year. I figured I have about 7-8 weeks of light campaigning to get folks to vote for me, because I am not a rock star, and I know that sometimes, the city can get sleepy, even with all the events, and I do get overlooked. I don't want to be overlooked. Then, I thought "why not run a little Mini-Mingle, at the tiny corner of the Hall of Fame where folks sign up for events?" So, I requested the place and time from my host, the lovely and gifted Lisa, and I got both. I'm opening it up to everybody from the Hall of Fame Induction in 2019 in San Antonio. But, this is a great way to kick-start a campaign and start getting people in Texas' seat in San Antonio, to know about me, and why I should be your next Hall of Fame Inductee. VOTE NOW HERE! Here is the general plan: I will accept votes, for two hours, on both Facebook, and Twitter, and then I'll give a little speech about myself. After that, I will give away some mini-swig, and will write a few words to be added to the Texas Hall of Fame Induction. TCAT will buy you a drink, and then I will be your designated driver home, and will be on the lookout for people who are feeling their first drink, or that just might become their first beer (or two). So, that is my plan. I am working on good questions that I want to ask the candidates, and I am also working on the Thank You speech for attendees. So, my plan is simple: Plenty of drink Mini-Mingle Mini-Swag -> people are allowed to vote as many times as they like I am working on a Hall of Fame speech, and I hope to squeeze in a Hall of Fame Induction speech in Texas (like, say, in 2019, in San Antonio). The Hall of Fame speech
