The Benefits of A Game Key

I have been using a Game Key to do my chess piece moves for a long time, and I have enjoyed the benefits over time.

1. Less muscle fatigue/less soreness
2. No storage issues
3. Easier at retrieving pieces/options

I bought the first set from a local sewing store, and I love how it has worked for me over the years. "It was the best $12 I have spent!" said my husband about my first set.

So, have you heard of Game Keys, and what do you like about them? Do you also use Game Keys with your own pieces? I would love to hear your thoughts on them!

> In traditional Irish céilí dance the click-click-click of knee heels on the floor is a constant, metronomic accompaniment. The sound of the knee-heels, combined with the quick, sharp dance, is the key to creating Irish step-dancing. The cat step is very similar to the traditional Irish knee-heels but is similar to a cat on its paws. You can see the video of the cat cat step dance at ⇒ Danny Hockaday. [EDIT: After asking my 93-year old grandmother to dance like a cat it is quite clear that she does not want to be associated with cats or step dancing on the cat step dance she mentions in the video. So in a footnote many, many years later here is the story. My grandmother, a very tall woman, must have been very happy with this episode. She loved dancing. She would have been about age 75 at the time. The video was her first opportunity to act like a cat and she took it. She kept grabbing my sister's ears to make her dance better. My sister, a lot smaller than her, was not so amused. After my grandmother left the video, she passed on to me. Then my sister being younger and quicker got a fine chance to practice over night with the cat claws in her ears.] You will need a soft floor to practice on. I sometimes find the expression, "follow your four-legged friend" suggests the cat step dance. I think not. I think my grandmother was dancing on her two-legged leg, the left one. The first time I laid eyes on (and heard) a cat step was on a trip to Boston in 1967. I was 18. I had spent a month in Boston visiting friends. I had learned to drive on Massachusetts highways, I had run the Boston Marathon, and I danced Irish step dance on the first Saturday in May. All that was left to do was to get back to campus for the end of my summer vacation. The campus committee organizing the Irish dancing event set up a dance class in the Fine and Performing Arts building on West Campus. It was the first time in my college career I had been dancing since high school. The evening of May 23rd I was late for my class (since it was the first class and they were still setting up.). I heard someone say, "to dance like a cat" so I followed the instructor, a music major, and walked into a toothy

Story: A dark fantasy setting, with a simple narrative, coupled with some light-hearted humor. Combat: Quick to load and quick to fire with tactical choices to make in front of the enemy. An RPG made especially for the PSP. Game Mechanics: An RPG made especially for the PSP and features a multitude of gameplay mechanics. Features: Extensive Character Customization: Skill trees, stats, and weapon enhancements. Party Building: Between four and a dozen characters to build, each with their own strengths and weaknesses. Each party member has a different personality. Saving: Save anywhere during a game, restarting at the last good save point. Side Quests: Visit the same location in multiple episodes to unlock more resources for your items. Walk Through: A very large game that offers over seventy-seven hours of gameplay. It's very recommended that you buy the game, but you won't get a full sense of the game until you play for days. Game Done Right: The game was designed specifically for the PSP, featuring a slightly more open, exploration based gameplay similar to the 2D Elder Scrolls series. When the game was first released, its ESRB rating stated it as Mature. This is mostly for the combat mechanic in the game, as it involves some gore. This was later changed to contain mild violence instead of gore. Story: Gabriel, the golden boy, was loved by all. While playing in the backyard as a child, he spoke to a beautiful girl who told him he would be the creator of legend. He spoke to her no more, but now, he has a problem. He has to find a way home. He decides to get more supplies, but is stopped along the way by a sinister old man. Now Gabriel is in a world of trouble… Combat: Combat takes place in a 3rd person view, but the character will zoom out and away from the action as you use the A button to attack. This opens up the possibility of attacking multiple enemies at once. Melee attacks involve strong strikes that will do a lot of damage, while ranged attacks involve weaker strikes that can still be useful. A lot of strategy goes into every attack. Inventory Management: Items can be equipped or unequipped. Each weapon or piece of armor can only be equipped once, so think before you move an item to the slot. Each weapon has a stats for attributes such as speed
