right..Stroke survival in United States from 2007 through 2013: a GIS study of temporal trends.

To determine trends in in-hospital mortality and survival to discharge in stroke at varying levels of geography, and by stroke etiology. Analysis of stroke hospitalizations and deaths from the 2007-2013 National Inpatient Sample, a US nationally representative sample of 50 million hospitalizations. In-hospital mortality was stratified by state population and urban and rural location, followed by determination of area-level survival to discharge, including 10 states by stroke subtype. Multivariable logistic regressions were applied to determine in-hospital mortality trends at state and county levels for all and by etiology, controlling for patient-level and hospital-level covariates. The crude in-hospital mortality c6a93da74d
